NOT QUITE TO HIS TASTE

Hunter Liked Bear, All Right, but That Particular One Was Not Done Enough.

Blenkins once joined a bear-hunting expedition. During the hunt, as he was resting by the side of a rock and talking with another hunter be began swanking heavily.

"If there's anything I dote on it's bear. A slice of bear steak nicely done is just perfect!" he said.

"Well," said his companion looking up, "I'm hanged if there isn't a bear now!"

The man who "doted on bear looked up, saw an immense grizzly on the top of the rock, gave a yell and leaped into the woods and disappeared. His companion soon overtook him and said to the fugitive as he came un:

"I thought you liked bear?"
"Well, I do," said the runaway; but that one wasn't done enough." -London Tit-Bits.

Build Nests Like an Oven.

Do you know how the oven bird got its name? Well, it was because its nest built among the leaves or pine needles on the ground is arched to give an ovenlike appearance, says the American Forestry association, Washington, which is encouraging bird conservation through bird-house building contests among school children and is conducting a national campaign. You do not see the oven bird sitting on the topmost twig of a tree like some other members of the feathery tribe, but he sticks close to the ground, mounting to the lower branches of a tree only to sing or to scold an intruder. The song of the oven bird somewhat resembles the word "teacher."

Wise Living

By REV. J. H. RALSTON, D. D. retary of Correspondence Department Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT-For the grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men, teaching us that, denying ungodiness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously and godly, in this present world; looking for that blessed here were the strainers are the strainers are the strainers. hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ. -Titus 2:11-13.

In this passage the saved man is told which be how to live in the age mself Wha was good for Paul's day, for Washington's day, is good for the twentieth century. and there need not be the swerving of a step from the path pointed out. Society is trying to save itself, and if it were wise it would find the very best instruction in this passage of Scripture. God's advice as to how to act costs nothing. It is altogether of grace, or favor. If it were not for this grace, oftentimes greatly abused, human affairs would immediately collapse, but God's hand is stretched out still, and we are simply to take what he offers.

To every one who accepts his salvation, through faith in the atoning sacrifice of his Son, God imparts his own nature, by the Holy Spirit. When a man is thus possessed, he hates sin in himself and others because God hates it, and he denies-he will not practice or sanction-"ungodliness and worldly lusts," and he lives "soberly, righteously and godly in this present world."

Under human government life for the individual, and for society, has two divisions-prohibition, or negation, and then positive obedience, or action, However men may object to prohibitions, they remain as facts in all laws. Man finds that there are many things that he must not do; he must deny ungodliness and desires that encronch on the rights of others. A man only needs to look about him to see ungodliness, practically of all kinds, and he must decline to enter into it. Probably this is not very difficult for those who read this sermon, but the most secure, in moral life, need to be careful, for Peter fell from the position of primacy among the apostles to the nosition of common laughing-stock and liar. There is no "no man's land" between the prohibitions and positive injunctions. If a man ceases to do wrong, he must immediately begin to do right, he must study the practice of sobriety, he should live righteously. And that is what the president of the United States is seeking to have the nations When you have decided to get rid of worms or Tapeworm, use "Dead Shot," Dr. Peery's Vermituge. One gose will expel direct divine government on the earth, this is the best guarantee of permanency of peace conditions.

> But a man should go further, he should be godly, and this he cannot be in reality until he accepts God's salvation through Christ.

> A godly, righteous man is the finest type of man. To be truly religious is not to be fanatical or superstitious, to go back to the sixteenth century. It is to be abreast of the age in which we live. The genuinely religious man is a forceful man and has power of influence beyond others.

To everything in life there must be motive, and here it is-the "blessed hope of the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savlour Jesus Christ."

The child always looks forward to the time when he will be a grown-up; the young man looks to the time when he can take his father's business or profession, and the mature man, if he is not willing to be considered a wornout horse, only fit to die, looks beyond this life.

Even those who have immortality in mind are quickened by that hope, but here the hope is defined-the hope of the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour.

Is that statement merely a rhetorical appeal to the imagination or figurative? As men and things are failing us all the time, and some of the wisest men are saying that the whole social world is about to go to pieces unless one little thing happens-the feeding of the starving peoples of Europe-is it not fine to have something that man does not manage?

Jesus Christ, as God, with his infinite power, will gloriously appear on this earth, and the arch-enemy of the race, Satan, will be bound, and a reign of righteousness be inaugurated, and that reign will never cease.

There is not a hope that the world has today but is questioned, and those hopes are many; but when the hope of the world rests on the infallible Word of God, indeed on God himself, man can speak and act with absolute confidence. If the coming of the great God was the same to all people, we might not urge the importance of this text, but to only those who deny ungodliness and worldly desires, and seek sobrlety, righteousness and godliness, will the blessings from that coming be secured. Those not thus described will be visited by a destruction, with which the destruction of the peoples on earth in the war areas within the last five years will be as child's play.
